

ART EDUCATION

Studying art in school improves students' performance in other subjects because it is easier for multi-skilled students to learn new things. That's why art should be obligatory in schools. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

There have been ongoing debates regarding whether or not _____. While some _____ that studying art can _____ (พัฒนา) students' learning capabilities across other _____ (สาขา), others argue that art should remain an _____ (วิชาเลือก). I firmly believe that _____ (ทำให้ art เป็นวิชาบังคับ) in schools can _____ (พัฒนา) a student's overall academic performance, and the reasons will be elaborated on in this essay.

To begin with, it might be reasonable for _____ (คนเห็นต่าง) to argue that art should not be a _____ (บังคับ) part of every school as _____. (ทำให้นักเรียนไม่เก่งวิชาการ). To explain it simply, this is because essential subjects, such as math, science, and English, _____ (ถูกมองว่าสำคัญมาก) for university entrance, _____ (ดังนั้น) many schools tend to discourage their pupils from _____ (พัฒนาศักยภาพด้านศิลปะ). A number of high schools in Thailand, for example, have removed art classes, such as music, from their curriculum and replaced them with math, and English _____ (แทน) _____ (เพื่อที่จะพัฒนา) the academic performance of their students.

_____ (อย่างไรก็ตาม), I would argue in favor of the idea that art education should be compulsory in every as it can _____ (พัฒนาความฉลาด) of students. To clarify, art can _____ (กระตุ้นให้เกิดการพัฒนาของหลาย skills) s such as creativity, critical thinking, and problem-solving, which are transferrable to other subject areas. A prime example of this is the benefit of learning music for foreign languages. _____ (ที่จริงแล้ว), there have been reports in Thailand that revealed _____ (คนที่เก่งอังกฤษมักจะเก่งดนตรีด้วย), as they could learn new vocabulary by singing _____ (แทนที่จะท่องจำ). From this perspective, it is evident that _____ (ตรงข้ามกับความเชื่อทั่วไป), students could _____ (ได้รับประโยชน์มากมายจาก) art classes, _____ (และดังนั้น), these classes should be compulsory in schools.

In conclusion, although it is undeniable that art might be considered unnecessary knowledge for university admission, I am of the opinion that it should be an integral part of every school as artistic skills could foster pupils' learning progress.

There have been ongoing debates regarding whether or not art should be integrated into the school curriculum. While some contend that studying art can foster students' learning capabilities across other disciplines, others argue that art should remain an optional subject. I firmly believe that making art compulsory in schools can bolster a student's overall academic performance, and the reasons will be elaborated on in this essay.

To begin with, it might be reasonable for skeptics to argue that art should not be a mandatory part of every school as it can prevent students from succeeding in academic subjects. To explain it simply, this is because essential subjects, such as math, science, and English, are considered to be of utmost importance for university entrance, therefore many schools tend to discourage their pupils from practicing art. A number of high schools in Thailand, for example, have removed art classes, such as music, from their curriculum and replaced them with math, and English instead in order to enhance the academic performance of their students.

However, I would argue in favor of the idea that art education should be compulsory in every as it can foster the intellectual development of students. To clarify, art can stimulate the development of a wide range of vital skills such as creativity, critical thinking, and problem-solving, which are transferrable to other subject areas. A prime example of this is the benefit of learning music for foreign languages. In fact, there have been reports in Thailand that revealed those with excellent English fluency were also proficient in music, as they could learn new vocabulary by singing rather than rote memorization. From this perspective, it is evident that contrary to popular belief, students could reap great benefits from art classes, and hence, these classes should be compulsory in schools.

In conclusion, although it is undeniable that art might be considered unnecessary knowledge for university admission, I am of the opinion that it should be an integral part of every school as artistic skills could foster pupils' learning progress.
