

MONEY/ BUSINESS

Useful ideas and vocabulary

1. Do you often buy more than you expected?
2. Do young people spend their money wisely?
3. Is it necessary to save money? Why?
4. What are some of the dangers involved in starting a business?
5. What do you think can be considered emerging industries?
6. Should companies promote competition and why?

Do you often buy more than you expected?

Yes, definitely, especially when I'm hungry. Whenever I was hungry, I would always buy so much food and I ended up not being able to eat everything. I think, personally, that is something that I need to change.

Do young people spend their money wisely?

That depends, in my opinion. Although many people believe that young people nowadays waste their money on frivolous items, I would say that I know a lot of people who are very wise with their money and would invest it in stocks or real estate. So I believe that the idea that young people are not smart when it comes to money is just a stereotype.

Is it necessary to save money? Why?

It's true that a lot of countries have welfare, but in countries like Thailand, if you are unemployed, there is no way for you to have any income, so it is extremely important for people who live in Thailand to have some savings just in case of an emergency.

What are some of the dangers involved in starting a business?

I think that the most important risk would be financial risks because you have to spend a lot of money to start a business, and if the business doesn't succeed, then you might end up losing a lot of money. For this reason, I think that the financial part is something that is most challenging. Furthermore, it can also be in terms of health, because when you start a business, you have to put in a lot of work, whether it be physical work or mental work.

What do you think can be considered emerging industries?

Anything that's talked about a lot in our society is considered an emerging industry. For example, I would say that online business is something that people have been talking about a lot in our society nowadays, so I think that anything that is online is considered an emerging industry.

Should companies promote competition and why?

I believe that competition is crucial because it brings out the best in employees. Imagine you're a company owner. If there's no competition, the employee can do whatever they want without any motivation to work harder. However, if you promote competition—for example, if you open up a position for a manager and you let your employees compete to get that position—then that will bring out the competitiveness and that will eventually have a positive effect on the performance and productivity of your company.