Overall, various transformations could be noticed over a 70-year period, which included the addition of new accommodations, extension of new roads and destruction of agricultural space.

Beginning with the northern part of the map, the shops and farmlands were replaced by new accommodation, which were constructed on both sides of the main road, and new roads were built to support them. Then, although the post office remained unchanged throughout the years, two new buildings were added at the primary school.

In terms of the southern section of the map, the entire agricultural zones disappeared in 2010 because they were turned into a residential area with a construction of a new road that connects new houses to the main road. On the western area, the large house was transformed into a retirement home while the gardens that used to be in front of it was demolished and replaced by new houses.
